This game was so annoying. Ay, yo, we heard you like achievements so we put achievements in your achievements so you can get achievements while you get achievements.

(The game also didn't give me one of them so I have 1580/1581 achievements). It wasn't what I expected it to be it's sort of like geometry dash. So sorry if I was a little rude.)=. I don't like how the game has over 1,000 achievements that don't even pop after you fulfill the required action and there's a bug with the game not restarting when you die but its level design and difficulty is on point so for its price it is worth it.

Just wish I coulda recorded a first impressions video for this but the screen only recorded a loading screen the whole time for whatever reason :(. Although the idea for the gameplay is nice, I had a bad time playing Jumbo Joe. First up, no controller support (how difficult can that be?). I could only use the keyboard or the left mouse button to play. And both the mouse and the keyboard had the same problem: about once every 5 to 10 double-jumps the second key V button press did not register resulting in Jumbo Joe falling to his death. This made the game completely unplayable. Shame...

Super entertaining game for such a simple platformer. Love the idea of it and while the game is very short the replayability is extrememely high. Also the insane amount of achievements makes doing everything really satisfying..
